Susan L. Taylor - Founder, University for Parents

The University for Parents founded by Susan L. Taylor, former editor in chief of Essence Magazine, is a community collaborative designed to empower parents through education, inspiration and support. Our curriculum meets our parents where they are, helps them strengthen their self-esteem, personal relationships and parenting skills, and inspires self-confidence and a love for learning. With these supports and several committed partnering organizations offering workforce-readiness skills training, our parents are able to overcome barriers to self-sufficiency.

Our program has a focus on training parents to be advocates for themselves, their children and their families, and to fully utilize wrap-around community supports available to them. Classes are held during the day between 10:00am and 2:30pm and in the evenings between 6:00-8:00pm. The class offerings are below.
